Merveilles de la nature et de l'art à Arrecife

Port Canaveral: Arrecife
(Lanzarote)

Mode d'arrivée: DOCK

Arrivée: 09:00

Départ: 18:00

Si l'on connaît aujourd'hui cette petite ville des Canaries, c'est grâce à l'artiste César Manrique, qui exprime son inspiration de manière éclectique : dans une grotte revisitée, sur des fresques et même dans sa propre demeure, dans la commune de Tahiche. Pour d'autres découvertes artistiques, rendez-vous au Musée International d'Art contemporain (MIAC) ou sous la mer, pour admirer les sculptures sous-marines de Jason deCaires Taylor. Le paysage de Timanfaya, lac de lave façonné par les éruptions volcaniques, vous attend pour une visite en 4x4. Quant aux vagues de la plage de Famara, elles invitent au surf et à faire le grand plongeon.

Le charme hispanique des Canaries

Port Canaveral: Santa Cruz de La Palma Mode d'arrivée: DOCK

Arrivée: 09:00

Départ: 18:00

Édifiée à la pointe nord-ouest de l'île, la moins touristique, la capitale aux rues pavées de La Isla Bonita était autrefois un port majeur de l'empire espagnol. Quelques musées retracent son histoire, notamment le Musée insulaire d'histoire naturelle. Flânez dans cette ville portuaire, ressentez le souffle des Caraïbes dans les étals de canne à sucre du marché couvert. Admirez les façades colorées, les balcons en bois ou les oriels, apportant une identité à chaque maison. Remontez les rues jusqu'aux impressionnantes demeures coloniales et à la Plaza de España, le centre névralgique et dynamique de Santa Cruz.

Gibraltar : gardien de la Méditerranée

Port Canaveral: Gibraltar

Mode d'arrivée: DOCK

Arrivée: 09:00

Départ: 18:00

Aileron gigantesque venu fendre les eaux, le rocher de Gibraltar garde l'entrée de la Méditerranée telle une sentinelle séculaire. Plantée du côté européen du détroit, cette colonne d'Hercule se dresse face à son homologue africaine. De son sommet, on aperçoit au loin la côte marocaine inondée de soleil et à ses pieds, les dauphins qui dansent dans les vagues. Percée de tunnels vieux de plusieurs siècles hérités du Grand Siècle et de grottes inscrites à l'UNESCO, le rocher envoûte depuis toujours l'imagination des artistes et des conquérants de tous horizons. Un funiculaire permet de gagner sans effort le sommet où se trouvent des batteries d'artillerie anciennes et un point de vue panoramique jalousement gardés par des légions de macaques de Barbarie.

Classical Seville and the Alcazar

In Seville, a wrong turn leads only to serendipity. Ancient bars on cobbled alleys, fiery flamenco, and the world's biggest gothic cathedral are among the Andalusian capital's abundant assets. The picturesque drive there, through olive groves, citrus trees, and vineyards, gives an enticing foretaste of the city to come. In Seville, we'll lead you through its ancient streets and plazas to the Barrio de Santa Cruz, the old Jewish quarter that today abounds with orange trees and beflowered squares. After lunch at a typical restaurant, you'll visit the colossal, arresting cathedral, the 98-metre Giralda tower, and the resplendent Royal Alcázar, a UNESCO World Heritage site and Europe's oldest working palace. Seville may be a compact city, but it packs more culture, history, and charisma than many of the world's great metropolises.

César Manrique – Where Nature and Art Combine

The tour begins with a visit to Fundación César Manrique, a foundation focused on showcasing Manrique's strong personal commitment to his work and his ecological vision. It was this vision that led him to reconvert a set of volcanic bubbles into his own home in El Taro de Tahíche, now the foundation's home. Touring Manrique's rooms, decorated with works of his own art and pieces from his private collection, is the best way to glimpse the mind and talent of this incomparable artist. Next, see Lagomar, a museum, restaurant, bar and private hillside residence that stands out due to its great natural and architectural appeal, on a National Geographic visit. Situated in the village of Nazaret in the municipality of Costa Teguise, the residence is built into an ancient volcanic quarry, using its lava as construction material. Lagomar is the surrounding nature, as the existing tunnels, recesses and terraces were formed from the molten lava released by a volcanic eruption. Lagomar perfectly reflects the spirit of Manrique, with a large part of it completed by his friend Jesús Soto. While at Lagomar, you'll meet the property's current owner, architect Beatriz van Hoff, who will share information about the property and her friendship with César Manrique. Travelling to the north of the island, see some of the mobiles Manrique created as part of his sculpture work, inspired by the windmills abundant in Lanzarote's past (Manrique called these mobile structures 'wind toys'). Enjoy a guided tour of Mirador del Río, the site built by Manrique to verify his hypothesis that humans could respect nature's essence and at the same time achieve an artistic and functional space for the tourism economy. Elevated on one of the cliffs of Famara, 470 m (1,542 ft) above the sea, this location was previously used as a defence point for the island. Enjoy a glass of local wine or other refreshment whilst taking in the scenic splendour that inspired Manrique.

Begin the excursion with a walk (approximately 2 km/1.2 mi) from the main road of La Geria to Bodega Nacho Romero. Along the way, relish incredible views of the unique landscape that surrounds you. The vineyards of La Geria on the island of Lanzarote are a treat for the eyes. Traditionally, each vine was protected by a hand-built wall of lava rocks to shield it from the wind. Upon arriving at the winery, enjoy a National Geographic exclusive opportunity to meet Nacho Romero, the winery owner, biologist and winemaker, who will share his experiences using the century-old system of cultivation that uses conic-shaped holes to allow the vines to reach the soil, which lies beneath a dense layer of volcanic ash. The method, adapted due to a series of volcanic eruptions that forever altered the soil, is hard work, but has led to a beautiful landscape that is known for its unique way of growing grapes from the volcanic ash. While at the private home bodega, sample some of the delicious wines produced there, where the local varietal, La Malvasía Volcánica, is considered to be amongst the oldest white grapes in the world. On the walk back to the pier, be sure to admire the unique volcanic landscape and the area's peculiar wine plantations with a newly found admiration for the local ingenuity in adapting to the environment whilst keeping local traditions alive.

Adventures with Mike Horn: Explore La Palma's Wild Beauty and Piratical Past by Land and Sea

Encounter La Palma's untamed soul on an adventure with celebrated explorer Mike Horn, to a spectacular sea cave that fishermen of old used as a hideaway from rapacious pirates. Starting in Tijarafe, Mike will share his deep environmental knowledge as he guides you through the island's prolific subtropical biota and down a rugged coastal path. From Porís de Candelaria, a remote hamlet at the cliff's base, you'll sail with the veteran seafarer to Cueva Bonita, a cavern local fishermen would flee to if they spotted raiders on the horizon. Known as the 'Atlantic Sistine Chapel', you'll see the soft light of sundown bathe the cave walls in a spectacle of near-sacral beauty that will linger in the mind on the return leg to Santa Cruz.
